EQUITY TO ORGANIZE

Speaking Campaign Will Be Inaugurated September 7th.

W. F. SHARP TO SPEAK.

Statement of Purposes and Aims of the Society Set Forth.

W. F. Sharp, State organizer of the American Society of Equity in Kentucky, will start a two weeks' campaign of organization in Christian county next Tuesday, Sept. 8.

The secretary, E. B. Robertson, sends us a copy of the constitution and by-laws and requests that the following declaration of purposes be published:

Objects of the A. S. of E. The first and great object is as follows:

1. To obtain profitable prices for the products of the farm, garden, and orchard.

The other objects follow:

2. To have built and maintained granaries, elevators, warehouses and cold storage houses on the farms, in principal market cities, and in all localities where necessary, so that farm products may be held and controlled for an advantageous price.

3. To secure equitable rates of transportation.

4. To secure legislation in the interest of agriculture.

5. To open up new markets and enlarge old ones.

9. To secure new seeds, grain, fruit, vegetables, etc., from home, and from foreign countries, and distribute them with a view of improving present crops and giving a greater diversity.

7. To report crops in this and in foreign countries, so that farmers may operate intelligently in planting and marketing.

8. To establish institutions of learning, so that farmers and their sons and daughters may be educated in scientific and intensive farming, the best methods of marketing and for the general advancement of agriculture.

9. To improve our highways.

10. To irrigate our land.

11. To prevent adulteration of food and marketing of same.

12. To promote social intercourse.

13. To settle disputes without recourse to law.

14. To promote farmers' insurance, life, fire and crop.

15. To establish similar societies in foreign countries.

From the resolutions adopted by the society Jan. 9, 1908, the following is taken:

Resolved, fourth, That we here declare that the principles of the American Society of Equity demand the enforcement of law against all citizens of the commonwealth of Kentucky and of the nation, whether the same be a trust or other aggregation of wealth, or the humblest farmer engaged in earning a living for his dependent family, and that we condemn, without reservation, all violations of law, whether it be by trust magnates or humble citizens, commonly denominated "night riders."

(Signed) W. E. Bourland, chairman; E. B. McEwen, M. F. Sharp, Henry E. Swain, James N. Banks.

The Appointments.

Mr. Sharp will address the people as follows:

Sept. 12, Highway, 7:30 p. m.

CLEANING OUT LITTLE RIVER

City Authorities Take Energetic Steps to Remove Stagnant Pools.

MUCH IMPROVEMENT.

Drainage Greatly Helped by a Force of Hands This Week.

The condition of Little River became unbearable last week by reason of filth of various kinds being conducted into it in the northern part of the city. A large sandbar of street washings has formed at the mouth of the large sewer on Second avenue and above that point the river is very sluggish and the current was almost imperceptible.

Health Officer Woodard and Councilman Higgins were put in charge of the matter Tuesday morning and a large force of hands were put to work in the river removing obstructions and draining the stagnant pools. Much headway was made in a few hours and the work was still in progress yesterday and the situation has been greatly relieved.

A rise in the river is anxiously awaited to give it a good flushing.

The recent ordinance removing sewerage from the stream after October will prevent the recurrence of the trouble if the cleaning is kept up until that time.

A great deal of street building material can be taken from the sandbar near the I. C. depot, if some way can be devised to get it up the steep banks.

RESOLUTIONS

In Memory of J. P. Nuckolls

Who Died Aug. 14, 1908.

The grim reaper, Death, has again invaded our ranks and taken from us our worthy and beloved brother, J. P. Nuckolls. Bro. Nuckolls was a man of many estimable traits of character, strong minded, but gentle and courteous in manners. He was ever ready to do a kindness for a friend or neighbor, was a skillful farmer, a thorough gentleman and Christian. He was 63 years old and we trust was garnered like a ripe sheaf into the Paradise of God.

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Nuckolls his family has lost a loving husband, a kind and generous father, the Grange a useful member and the community a good neighbor and a kind friend.

Resolved that we tender to the bereaved family in their great sorrow our heartfelt and sincere sympathy.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased brother and a copy be recorded in our proceedings.

McLEAN COLLEGE

Will Begin the Fall Session

Next Week.

McLean College, formerly S. K. C., will open the fall session next week and every indication points to an unusually well attended session.

Many repairs have been made during the vacation to add to the comfort and attractiveness of the dormitories. A new teacher, Miss Alexander, comes with high testimonials and has had experience in very large schools.

SOLD AT AUCTION

Another Step in the Bankruptcy Proceedings.

The plant of the Hopkinsville Lumber Co., consisting principally of the planing mill and stave factory, was sold at 10 o'clock Monday to W. L. Cortelyou, who bid it in for R. H. De Treville. The lumber and other stocks on hand had previously been sold to other parties.

SIX APPLICANTS

And Four of Them Successfully Passed Examination.

At the last examination of white applicants for certificates to teach in the county schools six took the examination. All the applicants were young ladies. Two were issued second-class certificates, two got third-class and two failed. There will be no more examinations this year.

BARN BURNED.

Building Contained Five Acres of Tobacco.

Lafayette, Ky., Sept. 2.—Sam Bumpus, a farmer of near this place, lost a barn containing five acres of tobacco, by fire about noon today. The tobacco was being cured and the building caught in the roof. The loss is about $900.

The Lafayette ball team defeated the St. Elmo nine yesterday in a game played at the latter place. The score was 6 to 4.

REFINING ROCK SALT.

Crude Material Mined and Purified by Intense Heat.

A new method of refining rock salt has been discovered. Instead of the old and slow process of liquefaction in water and subsequent evaporation the salt is melted and purified by fire. While in a liquid state all impurities are precipitated so as to be easily separated after cooling.

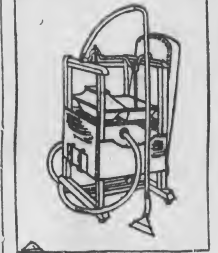

The London Lancet says: "A demonstration of the new process was given recently at one of our works near St. Helens. The rock salt was carried in barrows to the top of a huge oven and dropped in on to a metal plate heated to whiteness by gas. Rock salt requires for its melting a temperature of 1,400 degrees F., to which point the table evidently was heated, for it flowed off at a liquid and not a molten mass. After a time a quantity was drawn off into a large mold and compressed air was forced into it till a violent ebullition was set up, to facilitate the precipitation of the impurities to the bottom of the mold. After the mold was allowed to cool it was found that all the impurities had sunk to the bottom leaving pure white solid salt at the top. The impure portion of the block is separated easily by a blow with a chisel. The pure salt may then be ground to any degree of fineness required. The new method is said to be much cheaper than the old one and much more economical of time, taking hours only while the old one required days. Another advantage is that by the fire process the salt is freed from water and in this anhydrous condition is very slow in absorbing moisture from the atmosphere, so that no ingredients need be added to prevent it from 'caking.' Some hundreds of tons have been refined, tested and analyzed with it, and it is said, quite satisfactory results, and, says Machinery, is made by adding to each pound of lead while melting a teaspoonful of common salt.

A SANITARY DUSTER.

Portable Vacuum Machine For Cleaning Carpets and Drapery.

The vacuum system of cleaning the interior of houses has been so far perfected that it is now possible for every well regulated house to have one of these machines and with its use to have the work done as thoroughly as if performed by the larger plant which is drawn around on the running gear of a wagon.

The machine occupies a space about eighteen inches square and is less than four feet in height. It weighs about seventy-five pounds and being fitted with universal wheels, may be readily rolled around the establishment with little labor. A fan making ninety revolutions per minute creates sufficient vacuum to draw the dust from the draperies and carpets in a very complete manner. The machine is driven either by electric motor or by hand power. It is so constructed that the use of the current is obtained by means of a flexible cord connection with the electric light circuit.

Automatic Dampers.

The regitherm is a novel apparatus for the automatic control of the dampers of furnaces and stoves, and it acts with such wonderful promptness and energy that the heat of a candle applied for the fraction of a minute will cause it to raise a man of 150 pounds several inches. A small amount of volatile liquid is hermetically sealed in the instrument. As the surrounding temperature rises or falls the vapor of this substance changes its pressure one-half pound per square inch for each degree, and a rise of a single degree develops a force of fifteen pounds within the motor. This force expands the vessel half an inch. The movement is magnified eightfold in transmission to the dampers, changing the latter four inches, and in this way the temperature of the room or building is regulated within narrow limits.

Engine Economy.

Some tests have been made on the Northern railway of France to determine the economy of using one powerful engine instead of two smaller ones. The tests extended over six months' time and covered over 12,400 miles. Both trains were of the same weight—600 tons. The cost for fuel, oil, maintenance and wages for six months was $761 for the one and $1,041 for the two engines, or a saving of $280. The first cost was $23,080 for the single engine and $17,000 and $12,220 for the two engines.

Rainbow Hood Glass.

Glass is made translucent by being exposed in a red-hot condition to the fumes of salts of tin, barium and strontium. Red is produced by the strontia, blue by the barium and bluish white by the tin. In ancient glass, which is more opaque, iridescence is

KEEP THE MOUTH CLEAN.

Sound Teeth and Gums Prime Requisites For Good Health.

"Don't scrub your conscience, scrub your teeth," was the substance of the advice given by Dr. M. H. Fletcher in the American Medical Association's section on stomatology, which met recently at Chicago in the First regiment armory. He read a paper on "Diseases of the Alveolar Process." "The gums should be rubbed with a stiff bristle toothbrush," declared the doctor. "The gums should be rubbed as well as the teeth. The gums should be hard and tough, as hard as the palm of a person's hand. No cure of the teeth seems to be the almost universal rule. One of my patients put it very nicely to me after I had explained to her the proper methods. 'I thought I had been cleaning my teeth all these years,' she said, 'but I find that I have only been cleaning my conscience!'

"If the mouth could at all times be kept perfectly clean there would never be any decayed teeth or visits to the dentist. It is much that is paid to the dentist could be saved by proper care. Good teeth and healthy gums are prime requisites for good health."

Where Electricity Excels.

Electricity excels all other methods of transmission for convenience, says the Scientific American. An electric cable may be strung where required, and machinery may be arranged in any position without reference to line shafting. There are, instances, however, where rope drive will save both in first cost and in cost of operation, particularly when the process of manufacturing calls for a number of parallel shafts with machines nearly in one plane.

To Make Soft Solder.

An excellent soft solder good for purposes where not much pressure is carried, says Machinery, is made by adding to each pound of lead while melting a teaspoonful of common salt.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY,

LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.

The State University, Lexington, Kentucky, offers the following courses, namely, Agricultural, Mechanical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Mining Engineering, Classical and seven Scientific courses each of which extends over four years and leads to a Bachelor's degree; also a department of Law and a Department of Education, which has been established instead of the Normal School. Persons who enter this department prepare for advanced work in pedagogy and are granted a Bachelor's degree in this subject when completed. The Academy for preparatory instruction is retained.

County appointees receive free tuition, privilege of residence in the dormitories, fuel and light, traveling expenses, if they remain ten consecutive months, or one collegiate year.

The laboratories and museum are large, well equipped, comprehensive and modern. Military Science is fully provided for as required by Congress.

The graduates in the several courses of study readily find employment with liberal remuneration. The total number of matriculates for last year was 1078. Each department has a specialist at its head, with the necessary number of assistants.

Young women find an excellent home, with board and lodging, in Patterson Hall, which is well equipped with all the modern conveniences, bath-room, hall for physical culture, at $3.00 per week. All courses of study in the University are open to women on identical conditions with those applying to males.

The completion of the Agricultural, Mining Engineering Laboratory and Education buildings afford ample and commodious quarters for these departments, which are rapidly increasing in the number of matriculates.

The Weather.

FOR KENTUCKY—Generally fair and warmer Thursday.

The Beech Hargis case on a change of venue will be sent to Es-till county.

The Central Federated Union, composed of practically all of the unions of New York, has declared for Bryan and Kern.

Abd-el-Aziz, sultan of Record, is still in the field with a fighting force and is undisputed by recent reverses. His reinforcements are sweeping all before them.

William Jennings Bryan, Jr., is engaged to be married to Miss Helen Berger, daughter of Alex. Berger, a prominent miller of Milwaukee, Wis.

Friends of Mr. Kimball attribute his defeat for renomination, if such a prove to be, not to his record in Congress, which has been a most excellent one, as even his opponent has admitted, but to Senator Cantrell's intimate relations with the Burley tobacco movement which has swept everything before it throughout Central Kentucky—Lexington Leader.

Kimball announces that he does not yet concede defeat and will make a fight in the convention, and there is some talk of a "dark horse."

It is a sad blow to the cause of law and order that the spirit of retaliation has broken out in Caldwell county and property of association farmers has been destroyed. It is just as great a crime for a "Bob Cat" to destroy tobacco fields as it is for a night rider to sear a plant bed. Let the heavy hand of the law be laid upon both sets of criminals alike. With two organizations of outlaws preying upon each other, there is indeed a need for a Law and Order League in Caldwell county.

ANOTHER BARN BURNED

Alleged Work of Night Riders in Pendleton.

Falmouth, Ky., Sept. 2.—Night riders applied the torch to the barn of Mr. Arthur A. Wood of this place upon his farm. About twenty-five men, armed and mounted, were seen near the Wood place the night of the fire, but no one saw them apply the torch. Mr. Wood knew nothing of the fire until told of it the next morning, as he lives in this city and his farm is about six miles away.

Lacy Held Over.

John Lacy, col., charged with shooting into train No. 56, on the L. & N. at Salsburg August 8, was held over yesterday to the grand jury. Eugene Slaughter, who was with him, has not been apprehended.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when acting through the mucous membrane. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is far too great to be paid for by the small price. Halls Catarrh Cure, manufactured by Dr. J. C. Hays & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Halls Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by Dr. J. C. Hays.

SEND IN YOUR FUNDS.

The Kentuckian has been designated as one of the depositories of contributions to the National Democratic Campaign Fund and subscriptions will be received and forwarded to Governor Haskell, the treasurer of the National Democratic Committee. A list of all subscribers and subscriptions will be kept and publication made. In the event that contributors desire their names to be omitted they will kindly say so and their wishes will be respected. WHITE CITY AND THE STATE FAIR.

Louisville's Famous Amusement Park Will Be Open for Visitors From the State.

The White City, Louisville's great amusement park, built at a cost of $300,000, will be kept open through the week of the State Fair to give the visitors from the State an opportunity to enjoy its multitude of attractions.

This announcement is of the greatest interest to Kentucky people who will visit the fair, as it doubles the inducement of the trip to Louisville. The White City is the largest amusement park in the country outside of Chicago and New York. It covers enough space for a town, and in its bounds can be found amusement and entertainment unlimited.

The beauty of the White City in itself more than repays a visit. The immense Board Walk, built around a broad lagoon, is surrounded by the buildings and devices, all of them white and handsomely decorated. At one end of the walk is the Shoot-the-Chutes, the long incline descending to the lagoon, that the ride down the shutters may end in a delightful dash over the waters. At the other end of the lagoon is the large band pavilion. Here the Board Walk broadens into a great area, in the center of which stands the lofty electric tower, a structure of impressive beauty, and when illuminated at night, a dazzling spectacle. Beyond the tower is the German Village, with its beautiful shade trees. It occupies in itself enough ground for a park. Beyond the village is the immense pavilion, used for concerts, dancing, etc., which overlooks the majestic Ohio river at the most beautiful part of this stream, famed for its scenery. Adjoining the pavilion, on the river bank, is an open air theater and band stand, and further down the restaurant, where one may enjoy a meal beside the river at most reasonable rates.

The Scenic Railway, the longest in the world, is to the south of the Board Walk. A ride on it is a most delightful sensation of rapid travel, and at the same time perfectly safe. The Figure Eight is a similar device, in which one enjoys a ride that is a continuous whirl and a most fascinating pleasure.

The Shoot-the-Chutes, with its inspiring dash down the long incline and the glide across the waters of the lagoon, is a pleasure of which one never tires. The Canals of Venice afford a trip in a gondola of a quarter of a mile through a reproduction of the Italian city. The amusements of the Board Walk are too numerous to mention, but the Third Degree and the Laundry may be mentioned as affording fun that alone is worth the trip to Louisville. The White City is situated almost adjoining the State Fair and on the same car line, and can be reached without the slightest trouble by all fair visitors. It will be a delightful place to repair to after the fair has been enjoyed, and the White City's beauties and innocent amusements will doubtless please thousands of Kentucky folk during fair week.

Mr. Flaherty surveyed the clear sky with a frown. "I'll sure be raining to-day," he announced gloomily.

"What makes you say that?" asked his friend.
"Because," said Mr. Flaherty, "I've taken notice that when I don't expect it to rain at all that's the time it does, an' nobody could be expecting it today with a sky like that."—Youth's Companion.

Curley's Rescues.

By HENRY ROSSMORE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by P. C. Examinet.

Benjy, racing down the street, brought himself up with a jerk as a gong sounded out his brazen alarm. Then he hurried toward the building with the great wide doors in the middle of the block.

The gong was still sounding, and now could be heard the tramp of feet and hoofs, the jingle of metal work on the harness, the cries of the men. Then came the lesser note of the "rescue" bell and a horse cry of "All right!" from the captain, followed by the tramp of hoofs, sounding hollow upon the wooden floor as the fire horses returned to their stalls.

Benjy's face fell. Somewhere in the city horses were dashing madly over the pavements in their race to answer an alarm, but here the great green doors would remain closed. It was only a practice hitch for Thirteen company.

In the summer time practice hitches were the best fun, for the doors stood wide open, and he could watch the men as they put the harness trip in order again and lifted the great straps off the three big greys. Then too, the firemen lounged in front of the house, and he could hear them talking about the fires they had gone to, brave tales of valorous fights that lost nothing in the telling.

Benjy trotted down the street again to his own doornest and carefully backed himself into the vestibule. His shrill treble rang in imitation of the danger of the big gong, and with many a screech and shout he dashed off in the direction of the hydrant on the corner, pretending that the Thirteen company answering an alarm.

As he neared the fire house a second time the gong sounded again, and this time the number was followed by three the doors of the fire house were shut. Pete went to escort Bessie past the house in the hope that he would meet Curley. Often they did, but he scarcely gave heed to them as he went about his work. He would not let Bessie see how hurt he was, and she, womanlike, was the more demonstrative toward Pete because Curley would not show his anger or regret.

Back Curley gripped the wheel and tried to meet his disappointment like a man, but there were nights when he lay awake in quarters and looked for the call that would take him out to a fire where he could forget his own troubles in the fierce battle with the flames. The ride on the tender through the cool night air always steadied his nerves, and his unrest found ease in action.

So he lay one night trying to forget that a couple of hours earlier he had seen Pete and Bessie pass the house on their way to a dance. It had been a hard day for Thirteen, and the men had turned in early, most of them going to bed with the intention of sleeping undisturbed. But the clock had just struck the half hour after 10 when the big gong began to count out its deadly toll.

In an instant the room was in orderly confusion. The men sprang from their beds to their night boots, pulling their trousers over the legs of the boots as they ran toward the poles. The man on the desk and one or two others who had not yet turned in had the horses hitched, and as the great doors swung back and forth, the captain called out:

"Make it in a hurry," he shouted. "That's the box next to the Orpheum. If the fire is there!"

The rest was drowned in the clang of the tender bell as it followed the steamer from the station. Curley had heard enough. He had not realized at first that three-seven-three was the box nearest the Orpheum, where Pete and Bessie had gone.

The dance hall was a scene. Some of the hangings had caught fire when the electric plant had failed and recourse was had to gas. Before the engine could cover the fire, the short blocks the flames were burning through the windows and mounting to the roof.

The owners of the place reported that all had left the building before the fire had become serious, but even as she spoke a woman's form was silhouetted against the background of angry red flame, and a dash was made to the truck for the longest ladder.

Almost before it was against the building Curley had shoved aside the ladder man, who stood ready to mount, and pushed up the ladder ahead of him. He had recognized Bessie.

The ladder was short by a dozen feet, but Dick snatched his hook into the topmost rung and called to the girl to drop into his arms.

"I'm afraid," was the trembling reply, but Dick called again.

"It's me," he assured eagerly. "Don't be afraid, Bess. I won't let you drop."

"Dick! It is you?" There were relief and hope in the tones, and Curley braced himself for the shock of her jump.

"YOU'RE DEAD BORN, DICK—ELECT WHEN YOU BE AT A FIRE."

strokes, thrice repeated. Thirteen company made a quick hitch. A third alarm following so closely upon the first meant a fire well worth hurrying to. They went out on the third alarm from that station, and Lieutenant Curley sprang to the big doors and threw them open just as Benjy, running up, slipped on the pavement and fell full length in the path of the excited horses.

There was no holding back the greys, but Quinn, the driver, forced them away to the left, while Curley sprang forward and caught the child by the arm, throwing him one side just as the tender came up to the door and the wheels of the steamer almost grazed Curley's arm. Then he sprang to the tender steps, and they were turning the corner before Benjy found his voice.

Bessie Borden, who had seen the incident from the steps where she had some in search of Benjy, hurried to him, and presently she was bearing the sobbing child in her arms and mingling with his tears of terror her own tears of gratitude. Beyond a barked case Benjy was none the worse for his experience.

That night Benjy's father went down to the fire house to discover the name of the man who had saved the boy, and after that Lieutenant Curley was a frequent visitor at the Borden house. Mrs. Borden could not do enough for him, and it was at her suggestion that he boarded with them, taking his meals there in his three "swings" and spending the remainder of his liberty with Bessie Borden, while Benjy gazed awestruck and admiringly at his hero.

Curley's days off, too, were devoted to Bessie. He had neither boy nor girl in the city, and he was glad indeed to find so pleasant a way of spending his time. As regularly as his day of liberty came around it was a valuable performance in the afternoon with the melodrama in the evening except in summer, when the delights of the suburban resorts proved more tempting. But Bessie was not minded to be so easily won. In the fall, when the dancing classes opened and Dick Curley had begun to put on airs of ownership, Pete Bracy came to trouble the hitherto smoothly running course of true love.

Dancing classes, as Pete and Bessie

One Sunday morning, when everybody had gone home, a traveler undertook to show the landlord how to draw three different sorts of wine from the same cask. The two went down into the cellar and the stranger bored a hole in the barrel, on which he asked the landlord to place his thumb. He then bored a second hole, which also he had to stop with his other thumb. He had set to work on the third, when it apparently struck him that the landlord would not be equal to the task of stopping that also, and he ran out of the cellar to fetch a tap.

"I tell you," said Callender, "he thinks you are too formal, too cut and dried, too wrapped up in your profession. To her you're a fossil!"

"If I were you I'd kick him for saying that," said Galtley. "Go ahead, Abbott, old man; you're far enough away from the village so that your unbending from dignity will never be seen."

"Oh, I'll do more than that to him some time!" returned young Dr. Abbott, glaring with comic malevolence at Callender. "I'll wait until he is injured in some of his schoolboy escapades, and then I'll operate on him. Don't you feel the approach of another foolish attack, George?"

The three young men sat in the shade of a huge mass of rock that marked the end of a long, irregular ridge of hills which jutted out from the main range to the west. At the mouth of a tiny canyon just visible from the rocks a cluster of summer cottages showed white against the brown and gray of their surroundings.

George Callender, stretched his bulky body and took out a pair of fieldglasses from a case at his side. "No, Folsom," he replied at length. "I don't feel unusually foolish at present. But this grand air and this sunshine and—well, life in general greatly appeals to me today, and so there's no telling when I shall find it necessary to break out again. By Jove," he went on, pointing the glasses at the faraway cottages and the hills beyond, "the dear wife of my friend Alram here, and—yes, the dear sister of my dear wife aforementioned, all adorn with baskets and making for Flagstaff hill."

"Dear, dear," said Hiram Galtley; "anybody else in the party?"

"No, none that I can make out. Folsom, though, yes, there is. They're passing Evergreen Inn now, and that creditable simian Ramage has joined them. I believe, Abbott, that's what you called him, wasn't it—a creditable simian?"

"Callender," demanded Abbott sternly, "does Miss Alice know that you two ungainly wretches entered me away with you this morning without letting me know that she and other ladies were bent upon a picnic today?"

"Miss Alice?" queried Callender. "Oh, you mean little Alice, my wife's sister. Now that I think of it, Folsom, I believe she said something about asking you to have lunch with them on Flagstaff hill today. She asked if I thought you would care to leave your bug hunting and whether you would make one of so informal a party. I believe I have her heart!"

He broke out and leveled his glass at the distant hills.

"Well, well," cried Abbott impatiently, "what reply did you make? Something absurd, I suppose. Give me those glasses."

Callender adroitly moved out of reach of Abbott's arm and continued: "I forgot just what I did say, but it must have been something worthy of so ungainly a wretch. They're up on the hill now, Folsom, and Ramage has taken his place beside Alice and is carrying her basket."

"That's a bad sign," Galtley put in. "That's the way I began on the day I asked Ella to be my wife. You remember that picnic, George?"

"Certainly. Picnics are fatal affairs. I have no doubt that if Folsom were on Flagstaff hill today he'd be the happy man instead of Ramage. By Jove, his and Alice here strolled away from the rest and are picking wild flowers."

Abbott groaned.

"And I thought you were my friends—my boyhood friends. Here, give me those glasses, I say!"

Again Callender eluded his grasp and lightly sprang across a tree trunk which spanned the creek that rattled down from the range of hills and into the plain. Once safely across, he pulled away the log and set it floating downstream.

"We are your friends, Folsom," he declared from the opposite bank. "Haven't we patiently listened to your ravings about Alice for the past six months? Didn't we bring you out with us today on purpose to talk about her?"

"And you," cried the young doctor, turning to Galtley, "I suppose you're in this attempt to keep me away from Miss—from the picnic?"

"Don't speak so harshly, Folsom," Galtley returned. "Let's go leave George and hunt fossils or something."

"I've a notion to hunt you," Abbott answered, and he stepped toward Galtley.

"Oh, don't, doctor; don't, doctor!" Galtley screamed in a high falsetto as he sprang down the hill, with Abbott at his heels.

At the creek bank Galtley paused to look back, and, seeing the doctor still coming, he leaped into the stream and floundered across it.

Abbott stopped at the bank and began to throw stones at his inventors. They moved out of range of the missiles and walked downstream until the settlement of cottages came into view from behind the rocks, where they had been sitting on the other side of the creek.

Abbott followed them downstream on his side and bawled out half angry epithets at them. Callender, after a prolonged look through the glasses at Flagstaff hill, called out:

"Flagstaff! They're at the top now. I did so wait for a brother-in-law, and now I see he's a doctor in the family!"

"What chance, in a nutshell?" cried Folsom, James, up and down. "De piense, George, toss over those glasses!"

"I couldn't do it. This is a sight one doesn't see every day. There he goes, dropping down on his knees before his far-remembered brother-in-law Folsom; farewell forever!"

Desperately Abbott went to the bank, removed his coat and shoes and rolled up his trousers.

"Look out!" cried Galtley; "he's going to swim for it!"

Abbott plunged in and had hardly taken two steps when he slipped and fell. Immediately he arose again, splashed across the stream and clambered up on the opposite bank.

"Now," he groaned, "I'll show you what it means to tolerate a peaceable wretch!"

"Wait," called George from a safe distance; "he wasn't slipping on his knees, after all, so don't be angry. You wouldn't raise black and white lumps all over our pure, white bodies, would you, Folsom?"

"You'll see," retorted the angry young man, as he took up the chase.

The two led him along a devious path, through thickets and over rough prairie grass and rocky stretches of plateau. But his blood was up, and he doggedly kept on. They finally continued in the lead and frequently stopped to about back mocking comments and to report what could be seen by looking through the glasses.

"Say," cried George after one such look at Flagstaff hill, "I wish we were nearer, so we could distrust Alice's attention to the glasses. She's saying to her, I know she'd be pleased to see you unbending a little."

"That's all she's afraid of," Galtley took up. "She's told my wife as much lots of times. She thinks you're a born stiff—er—were born stiff, I mean."

"No," lawied Callender; "he means she thinks you're so wrapped up in your profession that you look upon even her love as a secondary affair, and she wants you to consider it the whole thing."

"The whole thing," began Galtley as he dodged a piece of granite which Abbott hurled at him, "that you can't enthuse over anything but strange things or fossils or a few degrees. We've often told her that she's wrong—be ducked to avoid another stone—but we couldn't convince her, and this is our reward—to be stoned—to be chased across country like innocent rabbits."

They were obliged to take up the cross country again, for Abbott was well entrenched. Down the creek was another log from bank to bank, and they darted across toward the cottages, with Albert in full cry at their heels.

There was no more opportunity for extended banter, although Galtley now and then flung back a stentorian wish that Alice might see them at the present moment.

When they drew near the cottages, the ladies endeavored to shape their courses so that the bound must cross the foot of Flagstaff hill, but he gave up and ran to kennel at the Evergreen Inn.

He came out an hour later with all signs of the chase removed from his clothing. But the banter of his friends still rankled, and he determined to see Miss Alice at once, then if he had been refused to go back to the city. So he bravely charged up Flagstaff hill to meet his fate.

He found Alice, and at the first opportunity he told her of his love. When, to his unspeakable joy, she found herself accepted he demanded to know whether or not he had heard the truth from his friends in regard to her estimation of his character.

"Yes, I did think that until this morning," answered the young lady. "But I know now that I was wrong. Folsom, dear, Mr. Ramage had a pair of powerful binoculars with him this morning, and I watched you every minute from the top of Flagstaff hill."

A Genuflection.

"It isn't everything," said a place in life that's just suited to him," said Mr. Hobart thoughtfully, "but I declare it seems as if Jed Loring had landed in the very spot he'd choose above every other."

"I didn't suppose anything would ever suit Jed," remarked Mrs. Hobart, "a man that always thought everybody was better off than he and never allowed to enjoy anything except other folks' misfortune. Where in the world is he?"

"While I was visiting Henry's folks," said Mr. Hobart, "they took me across the ferry to the island one day. I thought the face of the man that worked the gates looked kind of familiar, and he gazed at me real searching as Henry and I stood there."

"Aren't you Jim Hobart that used to live in Bushy? He asked me at last."

"I am and still do," says I, "and it's just come to me who you are. You're Jed Loring."

"He nodded that I was right. 'Got a job that suits you here, I guess,' I said, for he's grown stouter and looks considerably cheerier than he used to when he was here in Bushy."

"Yes, I have," he said, real hearty. "Why, this ferryboat runs back and forth every half hour all day long. I'm getting the hands to work that somebody misses it and gets as mad as fury?"

Thrice-A-Week World

More Alert, More Thorough
More Fearless Than Ever.

READ IN EVERY ENGLISH SPEAKING COUNTRY.

A President of the United States will be elected this year. Who is he and who is the man whom he will beat? Nobody yet knows, but the Thrice-A-Week edition of the New York World will tell you every step and every detail of what promises to be a campaign of the most absorbing interest. It may not tell you what you hope, but it will tell you what is. The Thrice-A-Week World long ago established a character for impartiality and fearlessness in the publication of news, and this it will maintain. If you want the news as it really is subscribe to the Thrice-A-Week edition of the New York World, which comes to you every other day except Sunday, and is thus practically a daily at the price of a weekly.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN together for one year for $2.65. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

MOB SCARE

In Owensboro Was Without Foundation.

About a dozen men under the river bank, at Daviess street Sunday night, quietly drinking beer and munching cheese and crackers gave several people a mob scare.

It was a harmless bunch, not counting the harm done to themselves, and instead of looking for somebody they were only trying to keep from being seen by anybody while they participated in a quiet revel in a city where such things usually means to get pulled by the police.—Owensboro Inquirer.

MUSIC UNDERGROUND.

Concert in Nature's Subterranean Theatre.

Probably the most peculiar circumstances under which Mr. Ernest Gamble ever sang were those surrounding his concert in Mammoth Cave. The guests at the hotel there, to give their jaded senses a new thrill, asked him and his company to perform. So they went down into the bowels of the earth, and to the natural theatre several miles from the mouth, with its platform 60 feet high and its roof 100 feet above, with a gallery at the rear, all just as nature made it. Mr. Gamble left his victims of emui on the floor of the theatre, while he clambered up the sixty-foot entrance onto the "boards." There were no footlights, so to keep the theatrical atmosphere and to complete the illusion and also to keep from falling off into the bottomless pit, a guide arranged the torches of the party in a semi-circle of footlights, while Mr.

Gamble with a torch in each hand, let fly in his beautiful bass, "Le Tambour Major."

Bats that had never seen the light of day, owls that had never a voice before, all the sightless creatures of this wonderful subterranean cavern came and ranged themselves about the circle of light, screeching and whistling. It was Orpheus in Hades over again. The effect was solemn and altogether it was very weird and ghastly. The blasé tourists had had a new sensation and Mr. Gamble had made his debut in a wonderful theatre from whose stage Edwin Booth had spoken and Jennie Lind had sung.

RETALIATORS

Adopt Same Cowardly Methods as Night Riders.

Princeton, Ky., Sept. 2.—The retaliation spirit seems to have developed in Caldwell county, according to reports from the Bethany section, five miles north of Princeton.

On Saturday the tobacco fields of Bud Traylor, Noah Nichols, Clay Crennan, William Leech, Lucian Hubbard, Will Carter and Burt Calvert were visited by unknown persons, who cut down many plants and placed bundles of switches with the tobacco, which was stacked in piles.

All the victims are leading members of the Tobacco Association and reside in a community where considerable animosity is said to exist. Calvert was warned by an anonymous note not to attend any more Tobacco Association meetings.
